

Pre Appointment Reading

Thank you for instructing us to prepare your will.

- Please read the important information set out below before our appointment; and
- Complete the "Wills Instructions" at the end of this form to the best of your ability. Retain the completed wills instruction form for your appointment with the Solicitor).

Solicitor assigned: Steven Fidock

I will bring with me a portable computer and printer and your documents will be produced at our appointment. If your requirements are complex, I will take your instructions at our meeting, prepare your will in my office and assist you with signing and witnessing within a few days of our initial meeting.

Witnessing of Documents

Please arrange for a friend or neighbour to attend about 30 - 40 minutes after the scheduled appointment time. I can be one witness and your friend or neighbour the other. If you are unable to arrange a witness, I will leave you with your wills and written signing instructions so you can sign your documents in your own time.

The witness must not be a beneficiary or a spouse of a beneficiary.

Matters for Consideration

Prior to our appointment, please give some thought to the following matters:

How do you want your estate divided?

You should not attempt to deal with each particular asset in your will.

This is because you cannot know now, what assets you will have when you die. Instead, you should picture your estate as a pool of assets which may include real estate, cash, investments, insurance proceeds etc. Regardless of how your estate is made up you need to decide how your estate is to be divided into shares, portions or percentages amongst your family and loved ones.

The way you will divide your estate will generally depend on what relationships you have. Some examples follow:

- You are married with children of the marriage - All to spouse, then to children, then to grandchildren.

- You have no spouse and have children – Divide all equally between my surviving children and then on to grandchildren.
- You have a spouse but no children (yet) - All to spouse, then to children (if any) but if no children then ½ to my family and other ½ to spouses family.
- You have a spouse and each of you have children from prior relationships –
 - I give a life interest to my spouse in the family home, and upon his or her death, my ½ of the family home goes to my children (it may be necessary to alter the title to the family home to tenants in common).
 - I give the proceeds of a life insurance policy to my children and the balance to my spouse (this ensures that your children inherit from you)
 - I give my entire estate to my spouse provided that when he or she dies my spouse provides for my children in his or her will (these are called mutual wills and a separate "mutual wills agreement" is required in which each spouse promises not to revoke their will after the death of the first spouse).
- You have no spouse and no children – All to parents, then to siblings then to nephews and nieces.

□ Who will be your executor ?

Generally, the primary beneficiary will be your executor. You can also appoint a backup executor if the primary executor is unable to act.

The role of executor is important - To find out what the executors role is see my web site <http://www.willspertth.net.au/faq>

You can appoint me as your executor if you wish - but I won't talk you into it. In fact, I suggest that you first consider family or friends to avoid incurring unnecessary expense.

If you want me to assist your named executor to administer a deceased estate my charges are generally less than half the rate charged by the Trustee Companies and I offer fixed quotes.

If your executor needs professional help getting Probate or dealing with any of the legal issue that arise with deceased estates he or she can turn to me for assistance in administering the estate.

□ Do you have a Business?

If you have a business, you can include the business in your will if you personally own the assets used in the business. You would personally own the business assets if the business was carried on as a sole trader or in a partnership. If a company or trust carries on the business then you will not own the business assets personally. Instead you may own the shares in the company which you can include in your will.

If you have a trust the control of the trust assets needs to change upon your death. This can often be detailed in the will or in the trust deed.

□ Guardianship

You can appoint a legal guardian for any child under the age of 18 years.

Where both biological parents die, the final decision as to who will be the guardian of your children rests with the Guardianship & Administration Board. In making its decision, the Board will take into account the guardian you have mentioned in your will.

You should avoid appointing joint guardians in case they divorce or separate.

□ Funeral Arrangements & Organ Donation

You can make an election to be buried or cremated. You can also direct that your organs and body tissue be made available for transplantation and/or research purposes.

ENDURING POWER OF ATTORNEY

You may also wish to have an Enduring Power of Attorney prepared during our appointment. This is a very important document for anyone who owns real estate or has investments in their name, alone or jointly with another person.

If you suffer a trauma such as stroke, heart attack or coma (say from a car accident) and you lose your capacity as a result, your real estate and other assets will become frozen during the period of your incapacity.

This raises significant legal problems.

For example, if your partner had a heart attack or stroke and lost his or her mental capacity, you could not sell or mortgage the family home to raise money for medical costs or an accommodation bond – because your partner (who is now incapacitated) cannot sign legal documents like a transfer of land, offer and acceptance contract or a bank mortgage. You would need to obtain an Order from the Guardianship Board before these documents could be signed and accepted by the Department of Land.

By executing an enduring power of attorney these problems disappear and your attorney can do anything you can legally do.

Storage of Your Documents

I will produce 2 copies of your will. Only 1 will is signed and the other unsigned will is your copy.

The Wills Bank” is a free government run storage service and I recommend you store your will there. You must complete the Wills Bank Deposit form (available at the Downloads Section of <http://www.willsperth.net.au/download>).

Payment

I will ask for payment at the conclusion of our appointment.

Payment can be made via:

- EFTPOS
- CASH
- CREDIT CARD
- CHEQUE

Please make all cheques payable to S. Fidock.
